Prior to the event, the librarians who guided participants through the immersive nature of the exhibition said a good number of people felt it was too hard. Despite the challenges, 62% of people felt it met their expectations. Perhaps the first real challenge was to navigate the exhibition space. All the practical puzzles and activities in the exhibition are related to the Interactive TV game of Fantasy Trivia Quiz. The exhibition takes place across four floors and consists of an assortment of objects which stimulate the senses, engage the mind and expand the imagination. Those who experience the exhibition know when they start a game on the VR screen that the choices they make could affect what happens. Participants also have to make choices based on their own knowledge of History, Space and Time. In one game, for example, it is clear there is conflict in the region between those who support a general and those who support a leader, so you have to decide whether to support one side or the other. "It doesn't matter if you don't know the answer. It's about debating with yourself in your head whether you think it's right or wrong to do this," said one participant. Librarians from the Australian Library and Information Association and the Story Noodle Theatre Company provided literacy support to participants. The Big Bang Theory's Dr Sperber said the exhibition did not
