At Texas State, ballins are born Javier Alcaraz-Gaitan is otherwise known in East Texas as the valedictorian of the Class of 2016. But, even though he is being celebrated for becoming the only student to graduate with honors in his attending class, it is another student who has been buzzing around making big news. And it's no ordinary buzzing. That student is the World Champion of the popular video game "Mario," and the best part about Mario Ballin' is that the 25-year-old Internet sensation hails from Texas. "I would say this kid has sort of turned Mario from an eccentric and annoying character into kind of a hero," says Henry Puccio, a professional video-game designer in Paris, who says the Canadian's name is Mario Lemieux. Puccio says that he met the Canadian while at the "Games of Fame and Legend" event in August. The event is held in Las Vegas, where special guests and press can interact with the people who have historically influenced pop culture. Players can compete against the legends or entertain them. The Vancouver native caught Puccio's eye. "As soon as I saw his Mario character and some of his silly antics," he says, "I thought, 'That's not British, I've got to ask him about why he made a character that's not British.'"

My experience with the game. Yes it was a clone but then again the whole experience is similar to that of a MMORPG but the endless void. Well not that it's just void. It's completely different compared to a MoRPG in that there is at least something happening. It's just... empty. Second point of contention for me: the 360 controller map is not standard, and you have to use the Xbox360 controller and change your hotkeys. That being said, when it works, it works good. I have been playing for the last 6 weeks for 30+ hours a day, and I can say with confidence that the game works. But it's rare that it works. Third point of contention is the loot system. The system is generally crap when it comes to exchanging items. There is no immediate exchange when you open a bag. Some players will immediately sell their account to get another account. The only way you can interact with other players is through trade chat, which is a tedious and frustratingly slow chat. There is no buying and selling like in LoL or DOTA2. There is no direct auction house. On top of all this, there is no way to buy "rares" besides via trade chat or buying the account of another player, as no one is ever willing to trade their account. You can message them via trade chat, but you never get any response. On top of all of this, the items you get are never good enough for the item, and the systems it has for giving out items is broken and takes far too long. The level of items gives out is laughable. In summary, the game is a cash grab. They have a mediocre game and a terrible monetization system. If you were hoping for a free to play mmorpg, this game is not for you. If you want to pay for it, be prepared to pay to win. You'll never pay your money back. If you are looking for a free to play mmorpg with a less than average monetization, then you might consider trying it out. Read the reviews first. Don't get your hopes up. That's what got me. I don't want to deal with this garbage game. I'd rather pay money for the good mmorpg than deal with this garbage. Read the reviews first.
