What's new:

Director Tim Ebert once again follows his National Office Christmas Party survival spoof John Carter, with a behind the scenes look at the process of making the Land of Pain. Cut to nine months later - and in a surprise twist to the apparent grave end for John Carter, he seemingly gets undressed in a sequence we believe to be intended as part of a prologue that has yet to be released. He then morphs into (and through) a number of new characters in 'Xander,' assisting the 'X-Next' X-Men, beset by an evil user of alien bioroids known as the 'Gominidae.' One of the new characters -- the exasperated coach of an army of the 'Gominidae' -- almost certainly receives his own spin-off film this December. Did you know there was a Land of Pain? No. We asked Tim: "If there was a Land of Pain -- what is the last thing you ever would think you would do? "I would never choose to be an actor. "We all need to learn to be forgiving and receive whatever life gives us, and learn to be good stewards of that life. "I understand this is a process we create something and then have to live in it a little more, but I don't have a lot of fantasies about becoming a great director. I think a lot of that has to do with the decision to do a film set in space." Tim: "I had grown up on 'Bewitched,' 'Star Trek,' 'Adventures of the Earthicans,' 'The Waterboy,' 'Monk' and things like that. "It's not up to you -- you just have to find a way to do that. You have to have the thick skin and take what life gives you, and not fall prey to the 'rules' of business or the network. They will always try to control and manage it. "It's sort of a frontier of cinema, and I'm not sure if you can ever master something like that. I was always a rule breaker and would do anything, because I didn't have anything to lose. "You have to learn just to live. Once you learn to live and let go a little more, all the crazy things come easy, and you have to make the tradeoff to have long-term success. "I just want to be in something well enough and

"Shevchenko Technology is an indie RPG shooter for Windows, Linux, Android and IOS. Game was under development for a year and it was created as my Senior Project at school" Become the hunter! You are hired to track down an enemy organization that is poaching endangered creatures from other worlds. The adventurer's level is limited, but here you can accomplish everything from killing to discovering new creatures. The game is played in first-person, it's very similar to the FPS genre. When a creature appears on the screen the game switches to third-person view. System Requirements: Windows (XP/Vista/7) Mac OS X Minimum: OS: 10.4.11 or higher Processor: Intel Core2 Duo 1.83GHz or equivalent Memory: 3GB RAM Graphics: ATI Radeon HD 2600 or NVIDIA GeForce 9600 or equivalent DirectX: 9.0c Hard Drive: 15GB HD space Additional Notes: Antigravity-based movement: The player's ship can move either on the ground or in the air. Clone: The player can spawn a clone of himself, which will behave exactly like the player while playing. It has unlimited energy and unlimited health. It is intended as an unlimited supply of ammo. Clones can be made using previously discovered techniques. Creatures: At the start of the game there is one type of predators, they are called hunters. The player can hire other hunters to destroy hunters. Each hunter requires a specific list of 4 equipment: gun, ammo, shield and backpack. When a hunter is killed the items are replenished automatically, so there's always a good supply. Equipment: When the player is killed he loses equipment that is equipped to the player. All equipment is replenished when the player's ship is destroyed. Defense: The player is able to build a shield and an automated gun turret that defends against hunters. Both are placed at the player's teleporter. Hunters: There are more than ten hunter species in the game. They belong to three groups: the hunter-killers, the teleporters and the harmless ones. The little space-quicks have three types of attacks: high, medium and low attack. Hunters are defeated by the player on both the ground and
