The former White House chief strategist, who has previously praised Donald Trump, said Britain was "in danger of catastrophe". He has also been accused of antisemitism after he said his former boss Mr Trump was "going to crush the Jewish global power structure" and of "not having a moral centre". Mr Bannon told BBC One's Question Time he believed criticism of him was driven by his opposition to Mr Trump. He also addressed the "very liberal" bias of mainstream media in the UK, after being repeatedly grilled about his past views on women and minorities. "You are trying to destroy the Republican Party and if you succeed then you'll have destroyed a lot of things that we believe in," he said. "Why do I get attacked?"

Because I backed Donald Trump, I'm a nationalist. The things that I say are good things for this country." Mr Bannon has used his time on the stage to defend many of his controversial views, including suggesting that the Kremlin could be involved in the murder of a Russian dissident in the UK and believes "cultural Marxism" is to blame for "concentrating control". He has described Islam as "evil" and advocated for "the total and complete destruction" of Islamic law to eliminate terrorism. He has been accused of harbouring a "hatred of Jews" and been pilloried for making violent and racist comments about immigrants. He has been accused of antisemitism after he took credit for Mr Trump's presidential victory and said he was "a nationalist who is going to war for America against this global power structure".

Image copyright PA Image caption Mr Bannon (right) said he was "a patriotic American" He sparked widespread criticism after claiming Mr Trump had upset some in the US intelligence community by responding "irritably" to a briefing about Russia's alleged interference in the 2016 election. Mr Bannon said he did not agree with Mr Trump's response to the 2016 election meddling by Moscow, but acknowledged that the president did not know all the facts. 0cc13bf012
