Introduction ASTA (Advanced System Technology, Inc.) is a full service IT Services Company. We offer a wide array of services ranging from Hardware/Rack/IT to Software application development. Having gathered nearly 20 years of IT experience under our belts we have thoroughly tested the algorithms used to create the official list and we have taken the extra efforts to double check these results to ensure they match the actual performance of these three top official contenders for the fastest turbo. We believe our official turbo-list is an accurate representation of the performance of these boards and aim to continue to be the most accurate source for information on these boards. Although their speeds are equivalent, we do not recommend any particular motherboard with ASTA and certainly not Intel's platform as a whole. Our official turbo list is meant for enthusiasts who want to create the performance on their own. When overclocking, mainly single core performance is what is most important. ASCAP Technical Intelligence used 80 unique performance points for their official list. The settings used for each point are as follows: AMD Athlon II - 1.8 GHz CPU overburned to 3.2 GHz, enabled Intel 3566 CPU support, enabled x64-only flags for ASRock, enabled ASRock XMP 2.0 (DDR3-1600) using CL15, enabled Xtreme M.O.J.E. (Intel Extreme Memory Profile Enhanced), enabled JetOC 2.0 for ASRock, disabled AMD Overdriving at the BIOS level, to achieve 2.1 GHz base and 2.4 GHz final, SATA3 (8 GB ports). 16GB of DDR3-1600 8x 8GB G.Skill Ripjaws series was used.
