One of the most important thing is the semicolon (;) which ended the function. Binding of IgE antibodies to modified oligosaccharides on soy bean beta-conglycinin. The immunogenicity of a large glycoprotein from soy bean, beta-conglycinin, was analyzed by using synthetic oligosaccharides. The structural change of the oligosaccharides was based on exoglycosidic linkage and variations in the chain length of N-acetylglucosamine (GlcNAc). The immunogenicity was evaluated by using ovalbumin (OVA)-specific murine monoclonal antibodies (mAbs), 2C11, 8C12 and 4B3. The mAbs bound poorly to beta-conglycinin, which was partially deglycosylated by enzymatic cleavage of oligosaccharides from the protein core. The epitope(s) recognized by the mAbs was confined to oligosaccharide structures, and bound to the backbone regions of oligosaccharides, as a result of the conformational change of GlcNAc residues. The conformational change of oligosaccharides changed the characteristics of the oligosaccharides and increased their immunogenicity. However, the binding pattern of the mAbs was unchanged by variations in the oligosac
